RETAIL PRICE: €25

PAGES: 224

FORMAT: 210 X 270

KEY WORDS : PSYCHOANALYSIS, WOMAN, FREEDOM

Complex, generous, narcissistic, free, incandescent, annoying, a lecturer, powerful, lively and funny. If you're looking for something lukewarm, pale and bland, you'll have to pass! Lou Andreas Salomé was the first female psychoanalyst in history. She analysed Sigmund Freud's own daughter, with whom she kept up a fascinating correspondence. She developed the notion of positive egocentrism. The common thread running through her life.

A philosopher who made a great contribution to Nietzsche, with whom she had a three-way love affair. With the thinker Paul Rée, they had a fruitful love affair, a communion of the spirit in which she refused all sexuality.

Her work has been translated abroad, featured on the French Education reading lists, and awarded several prizes : Prix Tatoulu (2020), Prix Gulli du Roman (2017). She is published by Sarbacane, Robert Laffont, Nathan, Bayard, Gallimard, Delcourt, among others.

KEY WORDS : PARENTING, PREMATURE BIRTH

A profoundly honest and moving narrative about the arrival of an extremely premature baby and the battle that follows—for her life, for the couple, and for a new sense of self as parents. At just six months pregnant, Héloïse suddenly goes into labor: an ambulance in the middle of the night, beeping machines, a husband in shock, medical teams fighting minute by minute, and the fragile heartbeat of a tiny girl who may not survive.

Told through two intersecting perspectives—a woman becoming a mother in brutal, accelerated circumstances, and a healthcare assistant navigating the relentless rhythm of the neonatal unit while raising her own family—this story offers a rare, intimate look inside a NICU. It explores the loneliness of parents, the misunderstandings with loved ones, the reinvention of the couple, and the invisible emotional toll on caregivers.

Adapted from Héloïse des Monstiers' acclaimed memoir Peau à Peau (Bouchet-Chastel), this is a powerful, relatable testimony about extreme prematurity, resilience, and the fragile beginnings of life.

Praise for the original book

"A wonderful, deeply moving book that will help many people." — La Maison des Maternelles, France 2

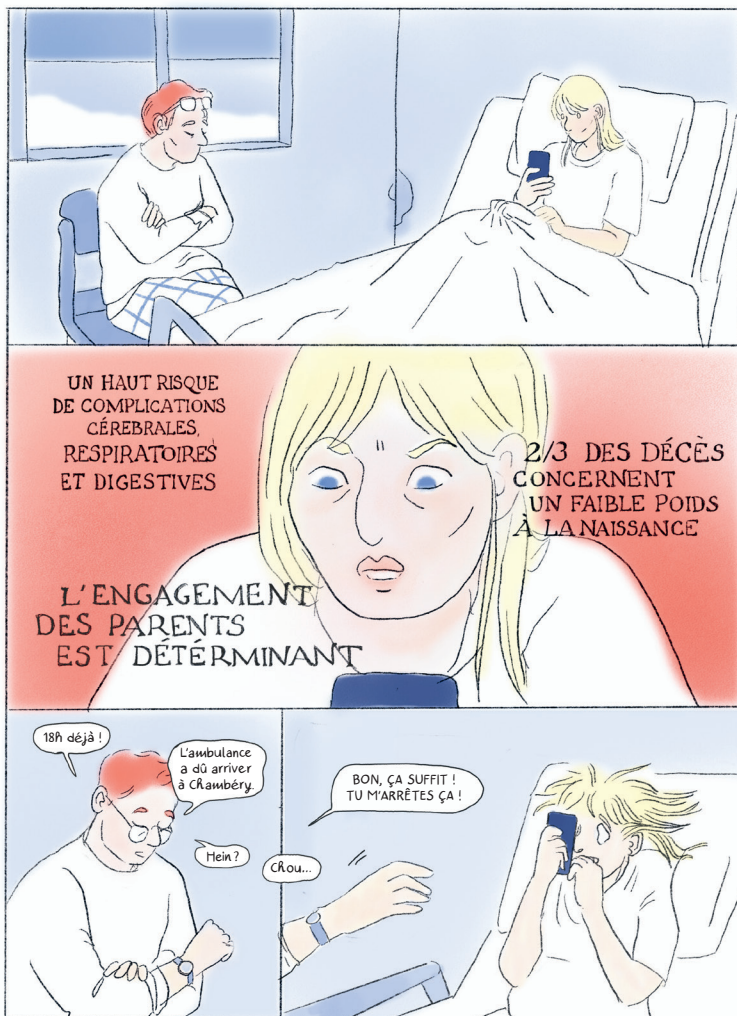

"A powerful, unfiltered testimony." — Elle Magazine

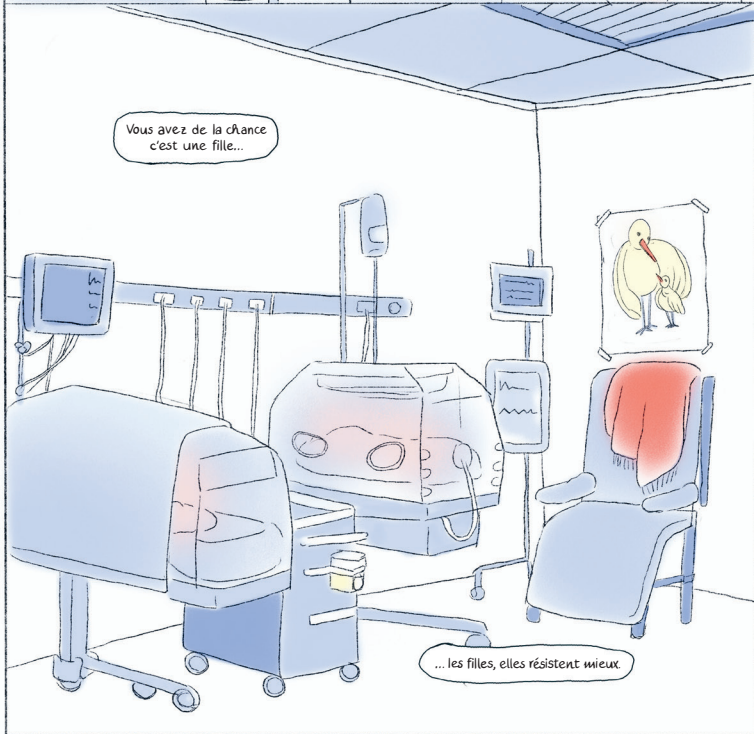

ILLUSTRATOR

After spending years sketching the shifting moods of Malmousque's rocky coastline—using her colored pencils to explore every shade of melancholy—Irène Tardif settled in Brussels, where she created her debut graphic novel. This first work carries the full emotional depth of her artistic journey: atmospheric, intimate, and visually striking. It introduces a fresh new voice in contemporary graphic storytelling, blending poetic sensitivity with a distinctive illustrative style that is already drawing attention.

KEY WORDS : MYTHS, AUTHENTICITY

France's most famous village is also one of its most misunderstood.

In this sharp, humorous portrait, renowned ELLE journalist Alix Girod de l'Ain dismantles the clichés surrounding Saint-Tropez and reveals the vibrant, authentic village behind the legend.

She revisits the myths she has heard since childhood—about wealth, crowds, glamour, and “bling-bling”—showing which are true, which are false, and why the reality is far more nuanced and charming. Even the surprise people express when she says she vacations there says more about Saint-Tropez's image than the place itself.

With wit, warmth, and keen insight, Girod de l'Ain offers a fresh, irresistible look at a destination everyone thinks they know—but very few truly understand.

AUTHOR

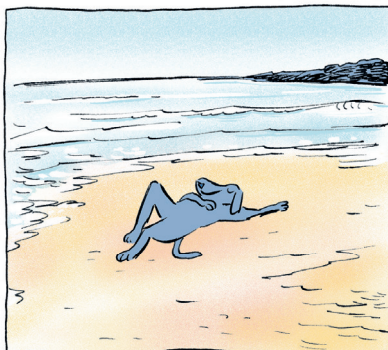

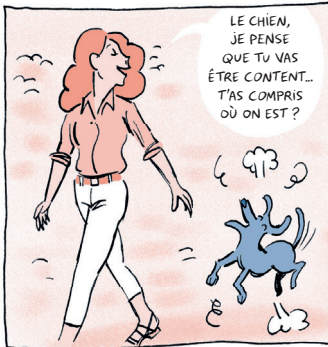

Alix Girod de l'Ain is a French writer, journalist and screenwriter. Since 1997, she has been one of the writers for «Elle» magazine, for which she writes sparkling columns and delivers funny and lighthearted advice to readers, under the pseudonym «Docteur Aga».

A regular contributor to the Dopotutto collective (Misma), he has published several books with La Pastèque and frequently illustrates for magazines. His 2016 book Carnets de bouffe offers a lively graphic tour of Montréal and Québec's restaurant scene. Originally from France, he has lived and worked in Montréal since 2006.

KEY WORDS : DATING, RELATIONSHIPS, FEMINISM

Love in Beta is a sharp, irresistibly funny work of autofiction that first appeared as a webcomic on Instagram—where its early episodes quickly went viral.

With wit, honesty, and a wonderfully self-deprecating sense of humor, Juliette shares what attracts her to the guys she meets on dating apps... and what she thinks draws them to her. Beneath the hilarious mishaps, unexpected twists, and cartoonishly absurd (yet entirely true!) situations lies a fresh, deeply feminist perspective—never moralizing, always insightful.

Juliette Boutant, co-creator with Thomas Mathieu of The Crocodile Project—a groundbreaking comic about street harassment—offers here a spirited look at modern romantic dynamics and the emotional codes shaping relationships today.

From pick-me girls to incels, love bombing, manipulation, ghosting, and role-playing, Love in Beta is both entertaining and thought-provoking. This is a book that captures the new language of love with intelligence, heart, and sharp cultural awareness.

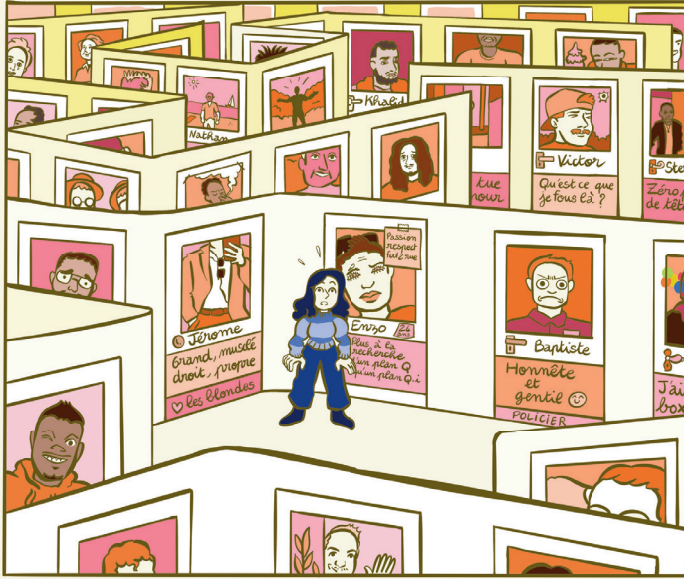

A bold, funny, and feminist graphic narrative for anyone trying to decode what dating has become.

AUTHOR-ILLUSTRATOR

Juliette Boutant is 33 years old. She is the co-author, with Thomas Mathieu, of «Projet Crocodiles,» a pioneering graphic novel about street harassment. Juliette Boutant is a comic book author and illustrator who divides her time between Angoulême and Brussels. Drawing on over 15 years of mediocre relationships with men and extensive field research on dating apps, she brings a poetic and committed perspective to the sometimes gritty realities of life.

Bonjour, Péppa. Maximilien m'a raconté pour ta sœur, tu es bien courageux.

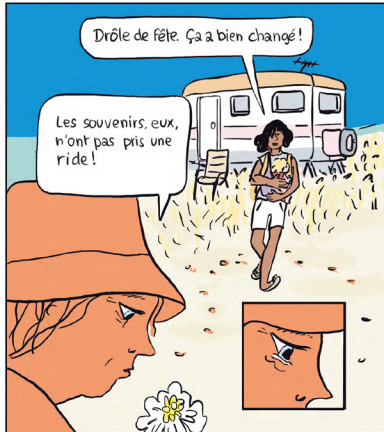

Vous vous installez, madame Feeters?

Appelle-moi Adrienne. Pas de madame entre nous! On ne s'installe pas, mais Henri met un temps fou à réparer cette voiture. Alors, je m'occupe.

Vous aimez ce vieux camping, alors?

J'aime les souvenirs qu'il me rappelle. Mon Bruno, les années 80, la fête permanente.

Drôle de fête. Ça a bien changé!

Les souvenirs, eux, n'ont pas pris une ride!

Bonne journée Henri! C'est quoi ce matin? Carbu? Joint de culasse?

Il y a une fuite quelque part! Mais où? C'est la grande question!

KEY WORDS : TEENAGE, HUMOR, FRIENDSHIP, PARENTS

The passage to adulthood involves many first times, like initiation rites, with their share of trial and error, looseness and laughter. Mary-Stone can count on her parents and her best friend to help her through all these stages... But it's Mary-Stone who will grow up, organising her first party, daring to declare her love, wiping the floor with her first rake, undergoing her first gynaecological consultation, sleeping with her mates under the stars... Or experiencing her first confinement.

All these funny and tender confidences, drawn in biro, give the impression of delving into the diaries of today's teenagers.

A comic that will appeal to young adults who will look back with a nostalgic smile, to teenagers who will find support in it, and to their parents who will better understand their child who has grown up so much. The book is a revival of a series published in Phosphore (380,000 readers/month).

Lucile Gomez is a comic book author. She explores themes surrounding intimacy and the female body with humor and finesse. She published a bestselling trilogy about pregnancy and motherhood (La Naissance en BD, nearly 62,000 copies sold). One morning, while walking with her baby son, Isabelle Maroger is approached by a woman who compliments her on her beautiful blond-haired, blue-eyed child and adds, «It's becoming a rare breed»...

A shock for Isabelle, who realizes that it's time for her to tell her story. The reason she, too, is tall, blond and blue-eyed is because she's half-Norwegian. During the war, her mother was born in a Lebensborn, the maternity wards set up by the Nazis to mass-produce little Aryans.

Isabelle will recount the investigation that enabled her mother, and therefore the whole family, to discover the secret of her birth, and all the consequences that this will entail, the intimate upheavals, the questioning, the changing relationships between children and parents.

Every day, millions of emojis are shared around the world. A young journalist realizes that her phone has a gas pump emoji, a nuclear power plant emoji and an oil barrel emoji, but no windmill emoji. She starts investigating: who decides which emojis accompany us in our daily lives? She meets the Japanese creator of the first emojis, the American intern who drew the most popular icons, a lawyer specializing in emoji (can you go to prison if you send a pistol emoji?), an Egyptologist who compares hieroglyphics and emojis... And retraces the global history of a phenomenon. The first comic-book investigation into emojis, their history and trade secrets shows a pop, light-hearted universe, revealing some very topical questions: are images really universal? Can GAFAM alone decide how we exchange?

A journalist recounts the life of the police, from jails to chases, to understand the police we have, rather than the police we'd like to see.

A year of immersion in a French police station, by journalist Mikael Corre. How does police custody work? What is the state of jails for people arrested drunk? What can the police do about drug trafficking? What roles do a lack of training (initial or ongoing), resources, social deprivation, inappropriate procedures and our contradictory expectations play in police dysfunction? Journalist Mikael Corre and cartoonist Bouqué give us a chance to see and hear what the police are like daily. It's an account of the situation in France, but it's not the only one as other countries will also be able to relate to it. A comic-book investigation that is bound to change the way you look at the police.

A young woman of mixed race investigates the origins and rise of wax on the African continent. She finds a moving echo to her own personal story.

An exploration of the fabric from every angle: historical, technical, economic, artistic, political and sociological. The first comic-book investigation into a fabric that has captured the hearts of Africans and the diaspora. A reflection on identity through the character of a young mixed-race student who reflects on her African identity, racism and the colonial past by making links with the history of wax.

Sophia is a student at a fashion school. The subject of her dissertation is compulsory: she has to study wax. The young mixed-race girl was reluctant to go, but by working in a fabric shop, visiting the factories of the great Dutch manufacturer Vlisco, listening to the confidences of African women and discovering the meaning of the wax patterns given to her by her father, she discovered the richness of this fabric that weaves links between Africa, Europe and Asia. She also touches on the paradoxes of a fabric born of colonisation that has become a source of pride and recognition for the entire African continent. Like an echo of her own personal story, and her quest for identity. In parallel with a major exhibition on Wax at the Musée de l'Homme in Paris.

KEY WORDS : HISTORY, FAMILY, WORLD WAR II

A postcard, an address, and a few memories from his great-aunt: the starting point of a family investigation in the Warsaw Ghetto, a personal and historical quest that turns the story of Jérémie Drès into our collective history.

Freta Street: a street in the Warsaw Ghetto, the ghosts who lived there: a scattered sibling group (the author's grandmother's), those who remained, those who went elsewhere in Europe or farther. Through postcards, letters, addresses, and photos, Jérémie reconstructs and recounts the condition of Jews in the 20th century, the impossible choices they faced, and the various dangers that lay in their path.

With this intimate investigation, he allows us to see, hear, and feel life in the Warsaw Ghetto, what Ashkenazi culture was, and the choices families had to make in an increasingly harsh daily life.

Carried out with rhythm and curiosity, this quest also introduces us to those who keep the memory of the Shoah alive today, at the Jewish Historical Institute in Warsaw, the Shoah Memorial in Paris, Yad Vashem in Israel, or the Ellis Island Archives Department in New York... The book also received support from the Foundation for the Memory of the Shoah.

A necessary work. A duty of remembrance that continues for new generations.

KEY WORDS : PARENTING, HUMOR

Here, Gwénaëlle Boulet adapts her radio chronicles into a graphic novel with verve, humor, and sarcasm, illustrated by Frédéric Benaglia. Together in real life, the duo shares their parenting experience without taboos and with plenty of freshness.

A dozen chapters cover all the stages of parenthood, from pregnancy to teenage years, from homework to Wednesday activities.

We recognize ourselves, we laugh at them, at us, we introspect... to help parents raise their children better!

ou au contraire à ça :

Et puis un jour, ça m'est tombé dessus.
